OFFICIAL PAPER OF DULUTH.

The farmers in the Red River valley have been taught a lesson this year which should prove profitable to them. Their wheat crop has failed and as that is the only commodity they attempt to raise they find themselves in a very unfortunate plight. The soil of Dakota is adapted to the successful cultivation of many different products and if farmers would only direct their efforts to diversified farming they would never find themselves without a crop of some kind. If one product failed another might thrive. Dakota will never reach the summit of prosperity until farming is carried on there as in other countries.

A great many people throughout the north are offering themselves as volunteers to go in the four stricken districts of Florida and act as nurses. The spirit of these people is commendable but unless they understand the art of nursing and are capable of standing the climate of Florida their services would be worse than useless and they would require the services of nurses instead of being able to aid the helpless.

The prohibitionists are losing ground. The indications from all quarters point to prohibition losses. The reason is evident. Temperance men who believe that prohibition is right know they have no chance of winning. They feel that there are other issues of great importance to the country at stake and they do not care to waste their votes. The prohibition vote this year will be greatly reduced.

Judge Ney, of Iowa, decides that under the prohibitory law of that state a man may not manufacture cider for his own use. Judge Ney may be a good lawyer and his decision may be good law, but there is grave doubt as to both. At any rate cider will be manufactured in Iowa for home consumption as heretofore, whatever the statutes may declare to the contrary.

It is now given out that the Farmers Alliance is going to support Canning for congress just because Gen. Barret and a few more are bad Republicans have bolted the Republican nominee and announced that they were the Farmers Alliance. They remind one very much of the three historical traitors who called themselves, "we, the people."

Chairman Bries does not show himself the shrewd politician he is said to be when he makes his nonsensical and unreasonable claims regarding the prospects of the Democratic party. There is no more show of the Democrats carrying Minnesota this year than there is of California invading China.

At Brainerd the campaign is being conducted by a series of joint debates between the Republican candidate for the legislature and the editor of the Brainerd Journal. The editor is a friend of the laboring man a free trader and a Democrat. He narrowly escaped being elected to the state legislature two years ago.

The Democratic bosses nominated their candidate, Eugene Wilson, for governor. William B. Merriam was opposed by the so called Republican ring. Wilson was nominated by professional politicians and Merriam was nominated by the people and the people are doing the voting this year.

H. H. Hawkins, the Democratic candidate for the legislature, will commence a vigorous canvass as soon as the Republicans have made their nomination. Although he is undoubtedly doomed to defeat, he will get as many votes as it is possible for any Democrat to get in this district.

It begins to look as if General Bragg would fail in his effort to secure the Democratic nomination for congress from one of the Wisconsin districts. The majority of the people of his district are not particularly infatuated with him because of the enemies he has made.

The "dreams" published in the Tribune are composed of taffy. Taffy in moderate quantities is pleasing to the taste but when it is consumed down coast throat in enormous chunks, it is nauseating and liable to make the victim sick.

Gunning the Democratic nominee for congress from the Fifth district, is rather at sea on the tariff issue. He does not know whether he is in favor of protection or not. He will endeavor, however, to satisfy everybody who has a vote.

G. E. Kindred is about to remove from Minnesota to Washington territory. Kindred has been one of the most prominent politicians in this state for years and his familiar face will be missed from Republican convention in the future.

In all states where elections have been held since President Cleveland issued his tariff message to congress the returns showed decided Republican gains. The president made no issue and in doing so insured the defeat of his party.

WEST END BOOM IN BUILDING.

Noticeable among the new buildings at the West End this summer is the new addition to the Clarendon hotel. It speaks well for the hotel that they have found their present house too small for the demands of the traveling public. In conversation with Mr. E. G. Wallinder, foreman for Messrs. Waterworth & Fee, the contractors for the Clarendon, it was learned that they were nearly through with their work there, and would soon go over to Superior to start work on the new hotel there.

Mr. Wallinder is well and favorably known here, having come from Caledonia, Dakota, over a year ago, and he has been in the employ of Messrs. Waterworth & Fee, contractors and builders, for some time.

While in conversation with Mr. Wallinder, the reporter learned that he had not found life a flowery bed of ease by any means.

He said that nearly all the time as he could remember, his trouble started; first he only noticed a liability to take cold easily, and that kept increasing, until he found he had a cold almost all the time, especially during the winter months for the last year. There was a dropping of mucus from the head into the throat, hacking and coughing, often very severe, at other times a dull heavy feeling through the forehead and over the eyes. When standing at work, or at other times, there would be a hollowness in the head and ringing in the ears. Pain through the chest, left most on the left side. Appetite was very poor, and had a tired, languid feeling most of the time.

Sleep not appearing to do him the good it should, also had a very bad cough. He was feeling as above described when he went to see Dr. Cosman, nearly two months ago. He had been reading the daily papers and reading of cases affected similarly, to himself, who had been treated with success by Dr. Cosman, so he concluded to go and see the doctor. After careful examination of his case, the doctor told him he was suffering with chronic catarrh and bronchitis, that he could treat him successfully, but that he would take time to effect a cure. So he started treatment at once and with the happiest results, for today, after less than two months treatment, he feels as well as he ever did and attributes this all to the excellent skill and treatment of Dr. Cosman, and would recommend any suffering as he was to go and see the doctor.

A RICH SECTION.

A COMPLETE GEOLOGICAL RESUME.

And a Thorough Description of all the Mines at Present Under Development.

The following is the completion of the descriptive article published Saturday on the silver mines of the Thunder Bay district. In the part of the article below will be found a description of all mines or openings in the district except the Beaver, which was described Saturday.

For the work done the Beaver mine is probably the most encouraging mine in the district. It is about 15 miles south of the Beaver. The vein runs northeast and southwest, and is strong and well defined. Its mineralization is identical with the Beaver, and some remarkably rich smelting ore has been taken out. On July 24 there was on hand 4 tons of rich ore worth $20,000 and 75 tons of mill rock worth $11,250, all taken out of 50 feet in length and 7 in height of the shaft. In 1887, at the present time is July $150,000. A 10 stamp mill is now being built and will soon be in operation. It is owned by Milwaukee parties who are able to and will develop thoroughly. A total of 1,200 feet has now been run.

THE FORTUNE.
This property adjoins the Beaver, about 1 mile from the Beaver. It was discovered in 1883 and developed under an option, during which considerable quantities of black malachite were taken out, as well as a high grade of the blende. So work is now being done owing to a lack of capital for development. The vein is from 3 to 7 feet wide and well defined. The whole vein stone is good mill rock. In three levels and one shaft 240 feet in all have been run.

HABIT MOUNTAIN.
Located three miles southeast of the Beaver it was first discovered in 1882. The first test of the vein was made by sending 35 tons of surface matter to the smelter which yielded $800 per ton; the next was a core of the vein, which yielded $225 per ton. The mine produces malachite, silver and argentite, and is rich in silver. It is owned by St. Paul but owing to litigation is not now worked. In three shafts and a level 500 feet have been run to the hill.

SILVER MOUNTAIN.
The East End Silver Mountain mine is owned and worked by an English company who bought at a reported price of $175,000. Very rich ore has been taken out and good work is now being done. It was recently purchased by Denver men, who will thoroughly develop it. It is about five feet wide and native and sulphide were found on the surface. When down eighteen feet a body of ore was struck yielding from $1,000 to $5,000 per ton, and the rock now on dump will run $50 to $100 per ton.

CROWN POINT.
This mine is owned by Duluth parties and some work is being done at the present time. A small force being on hand. The owners are, however, waiting until the completion of the new railroad before pushing it. Good mill rock is now being taken out and a late strike of more than usual richness was made. In all 450 feet has been run in two levels.

SILVER FOX.
This promising property was recently acquired by Messrs. Nichols & Pater, who also bought the West End Silver Mountain, and they will thoroughly develop it. The vein is six feet wide, strong and well defined. Recently the first test of the vein was made and at a depth of eighteen feet a large body of rich ore was struck, yielding $1,000 per ton. It is one of the richest discoveries yet made, and the prospect is flattering. Mr. Pater, a mining expert with long experience in the West, is now in charge of the property, and is sinking a pit, among them are Melville Hill, White Horse, etc., to 250, 300, 350, 400, 450, 500, 550, 600, 650, 700, 750, 800, 850, 900, 950, 1,000, 1,050, 1,100, 1,150, 1,200, 1,250, 1,300, 1,350, 1,400, 1,450, 1,500, 1,550, 1,600, 1,650, 1,700, 1,750, 1,800, 1,850, 1,900, 1,950, 2,000, 2,050, OFFICIAL PAPER OF DULUTH.

It is difficult to determine just what the outcome of the Veranda legislative convention tomorrow will be. Those who have ever had any dealings with the political tricksters who have for years run the politics of the new western counties know that no reliance whatever can be placed upon their word. They are willing to promise anything to induce the St. Louis county delegation to go into the convention. After the convention is once organized it would not be surprising to see them forget all their pledges and nominate P. J. Kout, or some other western man. Then St. Louis county would bolt, and any candidate who might be nominated here would be the candidate of bolters. That is the situation exactly, and unless the Duluth people are mighty careful they will get nicely left tomorrow.

The Minnesota Democratic campaign fund does not pan out. Although Eugene Wilson is a millionaire and amply able to stand the expense of his campaign, he sees the utter hopelessness of his chances for the election, and refuses to yield any of his hoarded wealth. M. W. Glenn, who was placed on the executive committee because of his handling abilities, declines to hustle, and as a last resort an ambassador has been sent to New York to work upon the sympathies of Chairman Bruce and invoke his aid in replenishing the state campaign fund. Perhaps the windy Bruce will be willing to back up his opinion regarding the outcome in Minnesota with hard cash.

When William B. Merriam, was speaker of the house of representatives and appointed his committees with a view to aiding the farmers in securing needed legislation he was commended by all parties for his fairness. Now that he is the Republican nominee for governor he is the object of the most shameful personal attacks by the Democratic press. The bitterness of these attacks would alone insure his election.

High Harrison recently said in addressing a meeting of the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union that the prayers of the women were worth as much to him in the coming election as the votes of the men. Perhaps, but unfortunately the women's prayers will not go into the ballot box and cannot, therefore, be counted by the judges.

St. Paul is talking about another ice palace, but the impression seems to be quite general that no ice palace will be built next year. It is thought that the legislature which meets in St. Paul in January will be of sufficient attraction to fill the city with sight-seers. The Minnesota legislature is very frequently a curiosity.

John Sullivan, the Boston slinger, is sick and for that reason he failed to put in an appearance yesterday to make final arrangements for his match with Jake Kilrain. It is quite evident that Mr. Sullivan's fighting days are over and it is a good thing for him to retire. Sullivan was a disgrace to the prize ring.

The paragrapher announced last night that with that issue his daily edition would cease. The paragrapher was small but it was full of life and spice and it will be sadly missed by those who have been in the habit of reading it. However, its editor did not find it remunerative and he very sensibly decided to discontinue.

C. A. Pillsbury & Co., the Minneapolis millers, recently divided among their employees $40,000 as their share of the profits of the business for one year. This was according to their annual custom, and the success of the firm demonstrates that the custom is a profitable one.

Thurman will not be called upon to make any more tours or speeches. His first effort in that direction proved so unsatisfactory that the efforts of the campaign managers will in future be directed toward keeping him at home with his "good old wife."

It seems to be the aim of Prohibition speakers to demonstrate that the Republican party is no more friendly to the cause of temperance than the Democratic party. The whiskey men, however, seem to think differently for they are all Democrats.

Her Most ought to have been hung long ago. Now he wants the anarchists to make a grand demonstration on the anniversary of the execution of the Chicago anarchists. Most ought to be muzzled and shipped to the Cannibal Islands.

Charles A. Denn, editor of the New York Sun, can draw out one conclusion from the Maine election and that is that the Republicans are gaining ground and the Democrats losing.

The Old Roman will, in a few days, issue his letter of acceptance of the Democratic nomination for the vice presidency. Wonder if he will say anything about the war being a failure.

There is some prospect of congress adjourning October 1. It is to be devoutly hoped that the law makers will stop work at that time and give the country a chance.

WEST END BOOM IN BUILDING.

Noticeable among the new buildings at the West End this summer is the new addition to the Clarendon hotel. It spans well for the hotel that they have found their present house too small for the demands of the traveling public. In conversation with Mr. E. G. Wallinder, foreman for Messrs. Waterworth & Fes, the contractors for the Clarendon, it was learned that they were nearly through with their work there, and would soon go over to Superior to start work on the new hotel there.

Mr. Wallinder is well and favorably known here, having come from Caledonia, Dakota, over a year ago, and he has been in the employ of Messrs. Waterworth & Fes, contractors and builders, for some time. While in conversation with Mr. Wallinder, the reporter learned that he had not found life a flowery bed of roses by any means. He said that nearly as long ago as he could remember, his trouble started; first he only noticed a liability to take cold easily, and that kept increasing, until he found he had cold almost all the time, especially and this been noticeable for the last year. There was a dropping of mucus from the head into the throat, hawking and coughing, often very severe, at other times a dull heavy feeling through the forehead and over the eyes. When standing at a distance, or at other times, there would be a fullness in the head and ringing in the ears. Pain through the chest, left most on the left side. Appetite was very poor, and had a tired languid feeling most of the time. Sleep not appearing to do him the good it should, also had a very bad cough. He was feeling as above described when he went to see Dr. Cosman, nearly two months ago. He had been reading the daily papers and reading of cases effected similarly to himself, who had been treated with success by Dr. Cosman, so he concluded to go and see the doctor. After careful examination of his case, the doctor told him he was suffering with chronic catarrh and bronchitis, but that he could treat him successfully, but that it would take time to effect a cure. So he started treatment at once and with the happiest results, for today, after less than two months, treatment, he feels as well as he ever did and attributes this all to the excellent skill and treatment of Dr. Cosman, who would recommend any suffering as he was to go and see the doctor.

Wonderful! A Book at One Reading.
What! require the substance of a difficult book at one reading! Yes, without any doubt. This can be accomplished by Prof. A. L. Lockett's system of memory training. The Professor has taught this marvelous method to immense classes at the principal colleges of the country, to classes of 1087 at Baltimore, 1005 at Detroit, 1500 at Philadelphia, 1113 at Washington, 1216 at Boston, etc. He also teaches it perfectly by correspondence. The method strengthens the memory for every service. Write for prospectus to Prof. A. L. Lockett, 237 Fifth avenue, New York.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

We were all in the smoking room of an Atlantic steamer and had sighted land that morning. After dark the steamer had hung into the heavens some skyrockets to announce her arrival to the lonely man in the lighthouse. We thought that this would be a fine thing to do. Everything that happened generally did. When we were settled again in the smoking room Smith said:

"That reminds me of—"
[Cries of "Hear, hear," "thought it would," etc., etc.]
Smith did not heed the interruption. He was on his way to England by goods. He had told more stories than any one else on board, and was generally looked up to as our most accomplished liar.

"It reminds me of a little fireworks display I had myself on the plateau over so many years ago. You see at that time I was keeping a general store out in one of the frontier settlements. Trade was principally with the cowboys, and right good customers they were. Easy to get along with when they weren't drunk, and then all you had to do was to give 'em the earth. That was all they wanted, that and a little whisky. Next week they would come back sober and pay for the damage without a grumble. They never cared what they paid for, a thing as long as it suited them, and in that they differed from the eastern customers I have now."

"Yes, but how about the fireworks?"
"Oh, I'm coming to that. About the 1st of May—a lovely day it was—now and rain and the streets were again a typical May day for that district, a cowboy from England rode up and—"
"From England?"

"Why, yes. In every sense of the word. There was a ranch a couple of days' travel from my place that we called 'England.' It was owned by an English company, and most of the boys were from England. I guess the majority of them didn't care to go back, either, for one reason and another. Some of them were Oxford and Cambridge men—at least so I was told. I was a little bit myself, although you may have thought so."

"Murmurs of astonishment, during which Smith filled up his pipe again and took an observation," as he called it, from the glass on the table.

"Well, he swung off his horse and said to me: 'Smith, says he, 'Do you know anything about fireworks?'"

"You mean, says he, except the kind you fellows give us on Saturday nights, and the sort of thing that is ten cents a glass."

"Well," says he, "we want to have a bang up display at the ranch on the night of the 18th."

"Twenty-fourth of what?" says I, "you mean the Fourth of July, don't you?"

"You bet not, don't you? If this is a success we will have one, too. The 24th of May is the queen's birthday, and we are going to celebrate it this year out at the ranch. Now, we don't care what it costs, we want it done right. Can you order a lot of fireworks?"

"I can order anything, if you fellows say you'll pay for it."

"All right. Here's $500 on account, now you go ahead. Sky rockets, pin wheels, red fire, Roman candles, bombs and 'em 'an of 'em. Besides we want a couple of barrels full of squibs."

"Squibs? say I, 'what's them?'"

"Well, fire crackers, I think they call 'em here. Do you know how to set 'em off?"

"Not a thing. Light 'em with a match, don't you?"

"I fancy so, but I want this thing done right, and don't you forget it. Where will you set 'em?"

"Chicago,"

"All right, tell them to send along a tenderfoot who's posted on that sort of thing. We want a first class display. We'll pay all his expenses and take him home. He'll have the biggest time he ever had. You come out with him and show him the way, and we'll use you white, too."

"Well, on about the 20th along came the Chicago man with the ammunition in a lot of boxes and barrels. We loaded 'em up on barrow and off we started for the ranch. The boys had been in, off and on, to see that there would be no hitch in the thing, and thought the things came two of the cowboys came in, and they said they would see us through to the camp, for there were rumors of Indians about, and we didn't want to lose our scalps. We kept a sharp lookout all that day, but saw nothing of any redskins. In fact, we did not really have any fears for 'em, anyhow, so near the settlement, and we camped on the first night feeling easy. We ought to have known that that was just when we might have expected them, but the boys were careless, and they had taken on too good a deal of liquor at the settlement, and had more with 'em. In fact, whisky was to form a good part of the celebration, and they had a lot with 'em."

"It was about midnight when I woke up, hearing a big yell, and before I could turn around I was tied so tight I couldn't move. The Chicago man was dreadfully frightened, but I don't know that he was any more scared than we were for we knew better."

"[He] just what was waiting for us. The cowboys were sobered up, now that they were tied with their own ropes so that they couldn't budge."

"They tied us onto our barrow, and at daylight they moved on for the mountains, keeping down the hollows as well as they could. This day was the 24th, and we had expected to get into camp that evening. When one of the cowboys got near me he whispered:

"Our only chance is to let 'em know some way that we have a lot of whisky with us, and then they'll all get drunk and we'll have a chance of getting away."

"Don't you bet on that," I says, "some of 'em will keep sober enough to keep us all right, like as we are."

"That's my theory," I said. "I can slip out of this tie the moment I want to. No Indian can tie me up. I used to travel with a spiritualist company and am up to the tying game."

"Well, we camped that night four or five miles north of the place where the boys were, and we knew there was little chance of the boys finding us, although we expected they would all be on the lookout. The cowboys noticed all this, and they wanted to get at a bag that was on one of the barrow and the Indians opened it for him. It was full of jugs packed in prairie grass. There was great excitement in camp when the Indians found the bag."

"But it was just as I said: four of 'em stayed as sober as judges and kept the rest quiet. Still they could not resist the temptation to take a swig or two, and all were pretty sleepy. About 10 o'clock—and it was pretty dark, too—the cowboy rolled over once or twice and got near me."

"Where's the tenderfoot?" he whispered. "Right here," I said.

"See here, Chicago, what package is that firecracker?"

"The two barrels are full of them," whispered the Chicago man.

"Can we get the head off one of 'em without making a noise?"

"What do you want to do? Set 'em off?"

"You bet. I'm going to make these Indians think a regiment has jumped in on them with repeating rifles."

"Well, you can't get the head off the barrel very easy, but if you can get alongside of one of them, you can cut between the staves with a knife and break a package loose and get the fire out of the fuse out, then touch it off with a match. Then you want to get away from that barrel mighty quick."

"Do you think the boys will hear it in camp when it goes off, supposing the Indians don't hear it?"

"Hear it? Lord, they'll hear it in Chicago a mile like this. In the Indian ears that barrel they's some cannon balls. Some of them will go up a mile."

directions. He had cut our ropes before he left so that if the barrel bounded near us we could get out of the way.

All at once I saw a faint glow as if a match had been struck and one of the Indians jumped to his feet, but without making any outcry. The next instant it was simply a flash of light.

There was one eternal rip, and then as if 10,000 men were firing off revolvers all at once. That barrel danced all over the camp like a whirlwind of fire and then a bomb went off and burst into a thousand fragments. It looked as if the earth had gone to pieces. All the camp was a seething mass of fiery smoke. The rockets shot into the air and skinned along the ground and seemed to be falling like rain. Every animal in the place stamped and scattered in all directions. The Indians I don't know became of them. I never saw one of them again. We heard some awful yells above the racket, but they were ten miles away before the din subsided.

Shortly after the show was over we heard the bells of the cowboys, and soon a score or more came dashing down on us. They thought at first we had done it all as a surprise to the camp, but I guess we surprised the Indians more. We found the other cowboys all tied up lying on the face. Dead! Bless you, no! Slept right through it all, and groveled when we kicked him awake. A little thing like that don't disturb the sleep of a cowboy when he sets out to have a comfortable season.—Lake Shore in Detroit Free Press.

Generosity of a Pioneer.

Away on what is known as the south branch of the Union Pacific railway in Gunnison county, Colorado, is a station called Parlin. There is nothing of the place except a depot and postoffice, and every train must stop there five minutes, whether it is a passenger or a freight train. Not many feet distant is the house of John Parlin. The house is made of logs and is on the side of a hill which stretches back and hitches itself to a mountain that rises itself up until its snowy summits touch the blue sky. Near the station come down the mountain side in a silvery laughter and all day long make music within a stone's throw of John Parlin.

The acres of foliage, the pastures green for miles about belong to John Parlin. The fields of blueberries and the valleys are John Parlin's. Near the station and in the middle of as limpid a stream as ever flowed on earth is a dairy in which are cows and crocks and crocks of milk from John Parlin's Holstein herd.

Here in this secluded spot, remote from the contentions of this busy world, came the railroad engineer running his line. John Parlin lived here and gave him of his cheer in a hospitable manner that would inspire an American Walter Scott. The engineer went away, and later on came other railroad men, some of them magnates, and John Parlin furnished them food and rest and plenty of milk. Then they told him that he wanted 1,500 acres of his land, and asked him to name his price.

The old man in his generosity of heart, to the nature which partook of the freedom of his home and its picturesque surroundings, said to them: "You can have 1,500 acres if you will put a depot over there near the dairy and make all your trains stop there five minutes." The road was built. The agreement was kept, and is still this day. And John Parlin sits in the doorway of his log house and sees the trains come in and go.

And the passenger train, the engineer and the fireman and the conductors and the brakemen leave their trains and go over to the dairy and around John Parlin's Holstein cows' milk, fresh and cooled by the mountain stream, free of charge. Then they return to the train and it speeds away, and John Parlin stands in his doorway and waves his hand and his children shout in nature's grasses at the departing train.—Chicago Times.

Two Sides to a Character.

On a train between Jersey City and Paterson a poorly dressed woman, carrying a baby in her arms, walked through two coaches and was unable to find a seat. The railroad agent was there. In a dozen cases behind the whole set by himself, and he meant to keep it. The woman finally found refuge in the smoking car, and by and by the boy went forward to enjoy a Havana and found her crying.

"What's the matter?"

"Baby is very ill, sir."

"And where you going?"

"To my sister's. My husband is dead and I have no home."

"Have you any money?"

"Not a dollar, sir."

"Umph! Sorry for you. Let me hand you this."

The log has been robbed of his riches. Woman's tears have melted his selfishness. He returned to his car, gathered the other boys about him, and said:

"Come down, poor widow-sick baby—to home. Come down."

The boys went down for their wallets, and in ten minutes the sum of $40 was put into the woman's hand, and the boy hugged her.

"There—there—it's all right—now a word! Now come back here."

And as she followed him into the coach a sterner look came over his face. He took the baby and said to her:

"Poor woman! Poor baby! Isn't there something we can do for you?"

The railroad boy can't be crowded, but he can be melted.—Troy Northern Budget.

Lithograph Copies of Water Colors.

The lithographer smiled when asked about this, and said that it was quite true that the lithograph copies of water colors were often better than the originals.

"Some little time ago," he said, "one of our thickest advertisers in the country was requested to order a quantity of lithograph water colors for advertising cards. He hesitated about doing it, saying that he did not believe the masses of the people cared for such things. They preferred the shiny gloss of the ordinary lithograph, he believed. He gave the order, however, and as he does things on a large scale, he gave a large order for the first set of four sketches. Before this was exhausted he ordered an even larger quantity, and this was again followed by an order larger than either of the previous ones. Some of his employees noticed that one man came frequently for the pictures, asking for three or four sets at once. They were glad to give them to him, for the cards were only used as advertisements, and of course they wanted as many as possible distributed. This stranger, however, once so often that their curiosity was aroused, and they took some pains to find out who he was. They found that he was a picture frame maker who was framing the cards in such a way as to hide the advertisements, and was doing a flourishing business, selling them at $2 a set."—New York Mail and Express.

A WARNING TO MAIDENS.

"The man I wed," the young girl said, "must be a noble cavalier."

"For romance with a sword and lance, A noble heart, devoid of fear,"

A year or two, that quickly flew, Had changed the maiden's wild part.

"The man I wed," this time she said, "must be a man of loving fear."

Her beauty grew, men sought to woo And wooed her with a little while, Her loveliness had, and proudly said, "I am a man of loving fear."

Time came and went, on robes best, She married the true heart as he feet. Her heart was stolen; she would not wed, The dream of youth was all too sweet.

So time sped on. Her youth had gone, And still her maiden hand was free. She hung her head as she looked on, "I wonder who will marry me?"

SLEEPING AFTER MEALS.

A Widespread but Mistaken Belief—Rest for the Brain.

There is a widespread superstition, cherished by the great majority of the people, that to sleep immediately after eating has taken food is to endanger health, to favor the onset of apoplexy, etc.—a superstition based on the assumption that during sleep the brain is normally congested. There is, no doubt, such a thing as congestive sleep, but during normal sleep the brain is anemic.

When a person has taken a fairly abundant lunch or dinner the stomach demands a special influx of blood whereby to accomplish its work of digestion; no organ can more easily empty with that demand than the brain, which, when in full activity, is sufficed with a maximum amount of the vital fluid.

But a derivation of blood from the brain to the stomach can only take place, except in exceptionally full blooded and vigorous persons, on the condition that the cerebral functions be measurable partially or wholly suspended. Hence many people after taking dinner feel indisposed for mental action, and a few are even prone to sleep.

The already partially anemic brain would fail yield up to the stomach a still further supply of blood, and yield itself up to the refreshing sleep. Doing so it gains new strength; meanwhile digestion proceeds unimpeded, and soon body and mind are again equipped to continue in full force the battle of life. But superstition, that sleep during digestion is dangerous, administers its pernicious influence, and, though telling them that after dinner they may do as they please, it insinuates into their minds the assurance of the adage, "after supper walk a mile."

The millions of its victims condemn, therefore, the strike to which it condemns them, and ignore the suggestions offered to them by the lower animals, which have already practiced the lessons of sound physiology by sleeping after feeding whenever they are allowed to do so. Hence the brain and human stomach of such victims contend with each other during the digestive process.

The brain, involved by superfluous blood, and the stomach, starved of blood, both suffer, and demands blood to work with, while the stomach, stimulated by its contents, strives to carry on its work of digestion, and the brain, starved of blood, is unable to do so.

Some things may be old names, but the common use of the word "digestion" is a misnomer, and demands a new supply of blood for the purpose. The result of the struggle is that the brain is unable to work well, and the stomach is unable to digest its food, and the brain is enfeebled by being denied its natural rest during the digestive process, and the healthy function of the stomach degenerates into dyspepsia.—Westminster Review.

A Very Remarkable Difference.

When doctors disagree who shall decide? A bit of enterprise on the part of The Boston Globe disclosed a remarkable difference of opinion among the physicians of that city.

A reporter, in perfect health, visited prominent Boston doctors and stated non-existent symptoms and requested a diagnosis. The man's appearance physically was perfect. But notwithstanding this, each doctor diagnosed the case in a different way, and each doctor gave the imaginary invalid a different prescription. The diagnoses and prescriptions, together with the interview with each doctor and a statement as to the reporter's elegant health, were published in The Globe.

THROUGH FROM WINNIPEG.

THE FIRST TRAVEL OVER THE NEW MANITOBA GOVERNMENT ROAD TO DULUTH.

Messrs. Chas. N. Bell, secretary of the Winnipeg board of trade, and James A. Mitchell, a leading grain dealer and exporter of the dominion, also from Winnipeg, arrived in Duluth this morning on an errand of no inconsiderable importance.

They came to familiarize themselves with the method of transacting grain business in Duluth, to inspect our elevators and to acquaint themselves with the grades and mode of weighing. They are here because the northwest territory of Manitoba and the board of trade of Winnipeg wish to do business with Duluth, and are now in such a position that they can do so.

The Red River Valley road, the line built by the Manitoba government to connect with the Northern Pacific and do away with the monopoly of the Canadian Pacific, is so far finished that these gentlemen rode over it yesterday afternoon from Winnipeg to the boundary line, and then on to Duluth via the Northern Pacific road.

They state that in three weeks surfacing and bridging will be in such condition that regular trains can be run, and the grain of the Canadian northwest shipped through Duluth to the east and Europe in bond, avoiding the grading monopoly of the C. P. R.

The branch to Fortage La Prairie is not yet finished, and they doubt if it will be this fall, and in that case Duluth will get this season but a small quantity of their grain. Next year, however, the tide will turn this way in a tremendous volume.

Speaking of the character of the grain in their section Mr. Mitchell said to-day to the Evening Herald: We have not so much frost-killed wheat in proportion to our crop as you have in Minnesota and Dakota, but it nevertheless is a calamity with us. Much grain that was threshed in early August when in blossom we thought would be all right but the threshers are telling a different story. We are in Duluth to-day to see if we can do business with you here.

Wheat sold in Winnipeg a few days ago on the basis of $1.055 a bushel at Port Arthur, which was 6 or 7 cents higher than you were here. Our crop is so late that unless we rush forward we can not send it by water while it we sent here we could get better advances and it would make less difference. You will not get much of our wheat this fall. We sent forward last year," said Secretary Bell, "about 11,000, 900 bushels of wheat, both by lake and by all rail. This year it will not be so much, perhaps about 8,000,000 or 10,000,000. Immigration is coming in rapidly from Ontario and with a good year we shall have a much greater crop in 1889. We return to Winnipeg this afternoon."

AN ARTFUL DOG.

The Kind of Animal Intelligence Boston Canines Possess.

I have today a dog story to tell which is not only interesting but absolutely true. All my stories are true, but this anecdote indicates such sagacity, such power of thought, such finesse on the part of the little animal concerned, that some skeptical person, unacquainted with me and with my ways, might question its authenticity. The hero is a small black and tan, whose mistress, following the foolish custom which prevails in these parts, leaves him behind when she goes to church. Last Sunday she requested her father and mother, who stayed at home, to keep the terrier in the house for a considerable time after her departure. They did so, and the dog tried every door and window, making frantic efforts to escape. Finally he appeared to be suddenly ill. Every dog owner knows that these animals are apt to be nauseated, and as he had always been let out on such occasions the door was immediately opened for him. Once outside he recovered instantaneously, and with a wicked look at the old couple whom he had thus cleverly fooled, he made off on his mistress' track as fast as his short legs could carry him. This was reasoning, and something more.—Boston Post.

ONE CENT A WORD COLUMN.

Short advertisements of a miscellaneous nature inserted in this column for one cent a word each insertion. No insertion less than ten cents. Much grain that was threshed in early August when in blossom we thought would be all right but the threshers are telling a different story. We are in Duluth to-day to see if we can do business with you here.

Wheat sold in Winnipeg a few days ago on the basis of $1.055 a bushel at Port Arthur, which was 6 or 7 cents higher than you were here. Our crop is so late that unless we rush forward we can not send it by water while it we sent here we could get better advances and it would make less difference. You will not get much of our wheat this fall. We sent forward last year," said Secretary Bell, "about 11,000, 900 bushels of wheat, both by lake and by all rail. This year it will not be so much, perhaps about 8,000,000 or 10,000,000. Immigration is coming in rapidly from Ontario and with a good year we shall have a much greater crop in 1889. We return to Winnipeg this afternoon."

A MAN WOLF.

While with the animal hunters in the jungles and foothills to the north of Benares we heard of a man wolf. On two former occasions we had received like reports, but had given little attention to them. The superstitious natives of India have many strange beliefs. One of them is that a brother who has murdered a brother turns into a man wolf, and roams the jungles 100 years as a penance. While they hold this animal in fear and terror, as well they may, they reason that if he is killed, another relative of the family must take his place and serve out the remainder of his sentence. Therefore, while they would talk to us of these monsters, they were always very careful not to locate them and bring them into danger. We had long before made up our minds that there was nothing so very queer in finding a wild man in the jungles of India. Children are carried off by wild men or wild animals almost daily, and even the civilized countries have their wild men roaming through the forests. We were willing to pay a round sum for the capture of a man wolf, believing he would turn out to be only a wild man, but at the same time a greater curiosity than a gorilla.

We had been making our headquarters in a village for several days, halting our traps for hyenas and having natives on the lookout for serpents, when one mid-afternoon I got into a hammock slung between two trees on the outskirts of the village and dropped to sleep. My two white men were already asleep in hammocks some distance away, and each of the natives as were not out for us were lying by to pass the heat of the day. There were two or three children playing at the door of a hut near me, but making little or no noise. It was as quiet as if a spell had been placed upon every inhabitant. I had not slept over half an hour when a muffled bit me on the cheek and started me up. I lay on my right side, and through the meshes of the hammock could see the edge of the jungle, about forty rods away. The children were still at play, and were a hundred feet nearer the jungle than I was. I moved as soon as I opened my eyes I saw a dark object leap from the cover of the thicket to the shelter of a single bush on the cleared ground. It looked to me in the brief glimpse I had like a gorilla. I measured the leap afterward with a tape line, and it was twenty-three feet.

I did not start up, but rubbed my eyes wide open to identify the creature. It had covered until I could see nothing but a black spot, and it was two or three minutes before it moved again. Then it suddenly leaped into view, bounded for ten feet, and landed on the ground. It was a man, exactly as a monkey leaps, and before I could call out it had seized a little boy about two and a half years old, and was retreating with him. It was on its hind legs, both arms around the child, and running with great swiftness. The boy was naked and hairy, but I was convinced that it was that of a human being. I yelled out, and the creature whirled about, raised the child, dashed it down on the hard level earth with terrible force. Then it took to the jungle, the villagers screaming out, and dropping down on all fours, bounded away into the jungle. I found the child gasping for breath. The fling had broken almost every bone in his body. It was not until the villagers were convinced that I had seen the creature and were assured of its identity that the headman acknowledged it to be a man wolf, and that it had long been a menace to the locality. It was, he said, his cousin, who had killed a brother fifteen years before. As the creature had now killed three children, and as it seemed to have a particular spite, and as its presence menaced the safety of the village, he would give his consent for us to seek its capture. I helped him to reach this conclusion by a present valued at $30, and by agreeing not to give the matter away in any other village.

The first thing to be done was to learn the habits of the creature. He was known to eat meat, roots, herbs and almost anything else which came in his way. He must sleep, but no one could say when, as he had been seen prowling around at all hours of the day and night. He was very strong and fierce, and it was doubted if one of the tiger cages would hold him. We decided to tempt his curiosity, and to this end, one of our cages was placed in the jungle, and the door so arranged as to shut the creature in if he entered. But he took no notice of the curiosity, or, if he did, it was to fight shy of the suspected trap. Twice in three days he was seen again on the borders of the village, evidently bent on further mischief, and the natives finally found a path which the man wolf used to come and go by, and a water hole. As soon as they came in with the news, we started out to set a different trap. The steel traps to catch wild animals have no teeth, and the jaws come together in a way to give one a leverage on the animal's foot. We have known of a full grown tiger being caught by the foot and firmly held in a trap no larger than the legs of a good sized muskrat. We replaced the chain with a half inch rope made of native grass, and as soon as a suitable spot had been selected we excavated a hole, buried the trap out of sight, and then bent down a sapling and tied the end of the rope to it. This sapling was held down by a trigger, which a sharp pull would release.

When the trap had been set no eye could detect anything suspicious around the spot, and we felt certain that the creature would get into trouble if he passed that way. When we could do no more we retired to the village, about a mile away. It was about noon when we arrived, and we were just in time to see a wonderful proceeding. A large and savage looking hyena came out of the jungle and snuffed and growled at us from a distance of about twenty rods. We refrained from shooting, for fear the reports would frighten the man wolf away, and while a hundred of us stood about the spot, he came nearer and nearer. It was the same creature I saw from the hammock. "It is the man wolf," cried the natives in chorus, and at least a dozen of them slunk away into the jungle. He had evidently been tracking the hyena, and he was there for revenge. He bounded over the ground with great leaps, and the hyena did not suspect his approach. The last bound was a tremendous curve in the air, and as the man wolf came down it was full upon the hyena's back. He uttered a terrible scream as he struck, and the hyena gave vent to something like a shriek. They rolled over and over on the ground, biting, clawing, growling and gurgling, but the fight did not last over sixty seconds. Then the man wolf sprang up, shook himself, and uttered a yell of triumph, and after threatening us for a couple of minutes re-entered the jungle. We went out to the body of the hyena, and its condition gave us a strong idea of the man wolf's fighting powers. One ear was torn off, both eyes plucked out, two legs broken, its tongue bitten nearly off, and it had several horrible gashes in the belly. It was plain that the creature was a match for lion or tiger, and we began to feel very uneasy. By the advice of the head man we built several extra fires and kept a sharp lookout.

"The fellow is evidently very angry," explained the old man. "You are white men, and he is not pleased at your coming. Perhaps he has been told you are here to capture him."

"But who could have told him?"

"He had a cousin who was turned into a vampire for striking his father, and another cousin who was turned into a serpent for turning our faith. Either one may have carried the man wolf the news."

We placed sentinels on the watch when ready to turn in, but everything passed off quietly until about midnight. Then a succession of shrieks and screams and roars brought every man, woman and child out of sleep with a bound. I had no other thought than that the man wolf had seized one of the sentinels, but as I looked out of the hut one called to me:

"Stand, you have caught the beast in your trap!"

It was a mile, as I have told you, from the village to the spot where we had set the trap, and yet the screams seemed close at hand. When the news went round that there was no danger the village soon quieted down, but there was no further sleep for any one. Whether caught or not, the creature seemed fastened to one locality for the remainder of the night, and of all the proceedings I ever know a wild beast to engage in his were the worst. He had a voice as strong as a lion's, and he was not quiet for two minutes at a time. He roared, screamed, shrieked, lamented and growled, and the wind brought us every sound. He still had a full head of steam on when daylight came, and after a hasty breakfast a party of twenty of us moved in his direction. He probably heard us coming, for his anger was freshly aroused, and pretty soon we could hear him tearing at the bushes.

I am free to say that the first sight of the man wolf, caught by the hind foot in the trap, and hanging head downward from the swaying sapling, took the courage out of me sooner than as if I had met a tiger face to face on the path. He hung about three feet from the earth, and as far as he could reach in every direction he had pulled up the bushes by the roots. He was as supple as a monkey, and could double himself up and reach the trap, but, strong as he was, he could not spring the jaws open and release his foot. There was a foot of chain before he could get to the rope, and the way he hit on that chain made us hold our breaths. Had he been cut free from I have no doubt he would have cut it in two. He had been caught when we first heard him scream out, and had been suspended for over four hours. We have thought he would be exhausted with pain and struggling, but he was not. As soon as we came near him he made such tremendous effort to get away, or to get at us, that all the natives fled in terror.

We quickly understood that we could do nothing with the beast until he had lost his strength and temper, and we returned to the village and left him hanging. All that day he yelled out every two or three minutes, and all that night we heard from him at irregularly, but late in the afternoon hunger and pain mastered him. We brought up a cage, got three or four ropes around him, and finally made him a prisoner. His foot and leg were terribly swollen, and he made but little resistance.

We now had opportunity to look him over. He was certainly a man wolf—that is, a native child had been carried off when young and brought up with the wild beasts for twenty years or more. This creature had a human face and form, but the body was covered with coarse hair, the ears were long, the hands out of shape, and he had learned to go as a four footed animal. He was indeed a horrible looking sight, but the worst feature about him was his eyes. No true wild beast ever saw through a more ugly pair. Everything was a villainous snarl to them, and the balls seemed to be aflame. We were contemplating ourselves on his easy capture when the head man replied:

"Wait a bit. Wait until his strength returns. You will never get him away from here."

We drew the cage to the village and gave the beast food and water. He readily accepted both, and his excitement was as humble as we could desire. He was biding his time, however. On the third day he minutely examined the construction of the cage and tested every bar. He did this when he thought he was unobserved. On the fifth day he began to snarl and growl and show his teeth, and on the sixth we started off with him, the cage being dragged by twelve natives. Everything went well up to noon, when we stopped for a rest and a bite to eat. As all were sitting down the man wolf suddenly sprang out of a corner where he had been eating, seized a bar in either hand, and with a tremendous effort wrenched them out. One he retained for a weapon as he leaped to the earth. It was so sudden that no one was prepared. He did not seek escape, but, rearing, and before we could pick up our guns and open fire he had killed three of the natives and severely wounded two others. He was still laying about him screaming with rage when one of the white men gave him a charge of buckshot and ended his career. He had struck only single blows, and yet each one had been hard enough to cripple or kill. But for our guns he would have killed every man in the party.—New York Sun.

The Pastime of Theft.

The sport of thieving, in its various forms, is the most irresistible of all pastimes, writes the late Chief Justice Cockburn in his reminiscences. What have the moors equal to it? No license to say for, no permission to ask, no close time, total idleness, great risk, frequent success, constant excitement, a community of their own, the whole public their preserve, the delight of eluding the law, and the many chances of escape even after being caught trespassing. If anything could be required to whet their appetites for this game, it would be its contrast with the dullness of a good prison recently left. I hope I'm wrong, but if there be a thoroughly reformed twice convicted thief, I would rather pay a shilling to see him than to see any other wonder in any living show.—Home Journal.

Superiority of Canadian Tea.

Our scientific editor has been at a school of tea-tasting in China, and has returned with some superior to China teas. It was prepared, simply as follows: Leaves of the present season. Boiling water poured on, and kept covered for about twenty minutes; kept nearly to boiling point—but not allowed to boil. Sweetened with refined sugar. Cream or milk added. The dried leaf of Lohum latifolium could be put on the market, adding the white margin, at ten cents per pound.—Educational Review.

Montenegro's Only Vacation.

Walter Baring, British agent at Cetinje, Montenegro, reports that there is only one road fit for a wagon in the whole country, and that there is practically no industry. Montenegro is scorned by all, but that of arms. All the tailors, painters, carpenters, masons, and other artisans are foreigners, and all goods except those which are the direct product of agriculture are imported, and are of the cheapest description, except the green and white cloth used for men's coats.—New York Sun.

Exhibited Ocular Evidence.

Pension Commissioner—You say you were literally pierced with bullets. I don't see how it was possible for you to survive the riddling. Have you any witness who can certify to the exact number of bullets that entered your body?

Applicant—Yes, sir; after the battle the chest protector which I had worn was in this terrible and convulsing condition. (And he exhibited a well worn porous plaster amid excited silence.)—Judge.

White and Gold.

The charm of the combination white and gold may be realized from a window decoration of a prominent jeweler. The back of the window is draped in white and its floor covered with white. Against this pure setting are placed all kinds of delicate jewels in gilt, gold and amber. Clocks, necklaces, pins and many other fashionable articles are thus added beauty from their dazzling background.—Chicago Herald.

Had Other Property.

An assessor, endeavoring to ascertain the value of a church property in Virginia, asked the value of a "Pony dollar," was the reply. "Has the church any other property?" was the next question, and the answer was: "Yes, a pitcher and a tin cup."—Chicago Herald.

To Prove His Case.

An Augusta, Me., boy brought the family bluff with him to a circus which was exhibiting in the town in order to prove that he was young enough to go in at half price.—New York Tribune.

JOHN G. GRAPHOPHONE, ESQ.

A New Entertainment for Midsummer Guests—Correct Articulation.

The latest invention of the day, the graphophone, has also been seized upon by novelty hunters, and graphophone parties are among the midsummer season's festivities. The host begs, borrows or buys a graphophone. Then she sends out cards for an informal reception. "No, no, Mr. Graphophone." An expert operator on hand to present Mr. Graphophone to the guests, and bring out his strong points. But that voraciously is generally allowed to introduce himself in a harsh voice, somewhat after the following manner:

"How are you? (whir.) How are you, ladies (irr.) I hope I (snapp) see you well this evening (pop-pop-pop). Let me introduce myself (whir.) I am your graphophone (pop.) John G. Graphophone, Esq., etc., etc."

After the professional has put the thing through its paces, the guests are invited to "back" it. It is worth the full price of admission to see the scared, nervous look which a woman puts the receiver up to her ear, after her doubts as to its diabolical nature have been silenced, but not obliterated. The novice who tries to talk into it looks as sheepish as though he were being compelled to make love in the presence of a congregation, and everything, even the most ordinary platitudes of the telephone service, by from his memory and leave him speechless. In general, a rising young man in the party who sings his latest song into the machine, and had a good deal of success in the matter of the voice that comes back to him. It is a fact that while the double mirror has long enabled us to see ourselves as others see us, no one, before the introduction of the graphophone into society, ever heard his voice as he really sounded. No person living could recognize his own voice when reproduced by a graphophone, while from a melody composed of the utterances of a dozen of his friends he will be able to recognize and name each voice instantly. When a person speaks the sound is conveyed to his ear through the vibrations of the skull and not through the vibrations of the air, the medium by which other ears are reached. There is generally an eccentricist on hand to declaim into the machine, and unless he is a model of his kind, he learns a few things about his own faults. If the graphophone ever comes into general use it will be the most powerful agency ever designed for the improvement and perfection of articulation. Every indistinctness, elision or slurring of a syllable or consonant, is magnified by the machine, and frequently leaves a black half or three-fourths of a word. After everybody has talked, whistled and sung into the receptive ear of Mr. Graphophone, that gentleman bids them to be useful and the party breaks up.—Washington Cor. New York Tribune.

Making Designs for Advertisements.

Six months ago an artist of my acquaintance complained to me in bitter terms about the difficulty he had in making both ends meet. He was a painter of decided ability, whose works sold certainly have sold upon their merits, but he was unknown outside of artistic circles, and even in the sections to which he occasionally sent them when driven to desperation, his canvases brought no remunerative price. Last week I remembered my artist friend again. He was doing the wall on Fifth avenue, and the most stylish of summer suits and a general air of affluence. He informed me that he had just come to town from Atlantic City, and was going to take a run down to Newport for a couple of weeks. I asked him if he had come into a fortune, and he laughed.

"Not exactly," said he. "The fact is, it is soap. When I got so desperate that I could not have been any worse off, an acquaintance of mine, who is one of the editors of a big magazine, sent for me to design a soap advertisement for that periodical. I was well paid for it. Since then I have been kept busy making designs for advertisements in the newspapers and magazines. It pays cash, and more cash in proportion to the labor than painting pictures, and there is more to it than I care to do. I have frequently to decline orders in order to find time to continue my painting."

It is a fact that few of the public are aware of, I suppose, that many of the advertisement designs which appear in the various publications of the day are executed by the most prominent artists in the country. If they were signed by the designers' names they would be recognized as the productions of men whose pictures receive high praise at the regular art exhibitions and whose reputations are high in the roll of American artists. What with designing advertisements and making illustrations for books and magazines, it is a very poor artist who nowadays cannot earn a good living. For a long time many of our painters held out against the seductions of the commercial community on the ground that it was beneath their dignity to sacrifice their art to business, but it is a rare case at present when such a commission is refused.—Alfred Trimble in New York News.

The "Upset" Canoe Race.

There is one event in every canoe regatta that amuses the lay spectator—the "upset" race. The sailing races may be tiresome, and devoid of interest through lack of wind. The paddling races may be exciting, but for pure fun the upset race is sure to carry off the palm. It is to begin with a short race of about 200 feet. The canoes are started just as in paddling races, and when well under way, a signal is given from shore, at which every paddler must immediately capsize his canoe, turn it completely over, regain his seat and paddle to the finish. The overturning of the whole fleet of canoes at the same instant is a novel and ludicrous sight, and the struggles of the paddlers to crawl over the sides of the canoes, without again upsetting them, are very funny to watch.

These races have produced more skill in handling the canoe under difficulties than any other event. The contestants must be good swimmers and strong. They must be active and thoroughly accustomed to the water, and must have a practical knowledge of balance. If an "upset" or "man overboard" event should be added to rowing regattas it might go far toward relieving the annual number of accidents and fatalities from this fine sport. The fun comes in at a canoe "upset" race mainly from the entire absence of danger. Risk is lacking simply because the men who compete are all skillful hands. The training is invaluable to the canoeists, and it has prevented many an accident by giving the paddlers confidence in the canoes and themselves when accidentally placed in trying circumstances.—Outing.

Cosmopolitan of Vegetable Growth.

It is a singular and as yet unexplained fact that in certain species of vegetable growth there are found a variety of stones supposed to be formed and deposited in their tissues from the silicious and calcareous juices circulating in their organisms. Thus, in the bamboo a round stone is found at the joints of the cane called "tabassou." Another curiosity of the sort is the "coconut stone" found in the endosperm of the coconut in Java and other East India islands. Dr. Kimmels describes it as a pure carbonate of lime. It is sometimes round, sometimes pear shaped, while the opposite is that of a white pearl without much luster. Some of the stones are as large as cherries and as hard as feldspar or opal. They are very rare and are regarded as precious stones by the orientals and charms against disease and evil spirits by the natives. Stones of this kind are sometimes found in the pomegranate and other East India fruits. Apatite has been discovered in the midst of tank wood.—New Orleans Picayune.

ON THE HILLTOP.

I am upon the hilltop yet,
And free from every basilar fret;
And ever thus, in peace of mind,
I give my pity to my kind.

DULUTH, MINN., SEPT. 16, 1888.

WHEREAS, a petition has been filed in this office by order of the Common Council, and required by law seeking for the vacation of a portion of the alley in block 121, Second Division, Duluth Proper, extending from the alley between the eastern line of lots 91 and 92, in said block 121; and

WHEREAS, the petitioners state that they are a majority of all the owners of the property in said block 121 affected by said proposed vacation.

Therefore, notice is hereby given that said petition will be heard and considered by the committee of the Common Council on streets, alleys and bridges, to whom said petition was referred, at the Board of the City of Duluth, on the afternoon of Monday the 19th day of October, A. D. 1888, at the hour of 4 o'clock p. m.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DULUTH.

Fergus Falls Journal: Otter Tail county should poll 6,000 votes this fall and we must do it or lose our place as third county in the state. Let every one, regardless of party, see that a full vote is got out.

Otter Tail county will have to poll a good many more than 6,000 votes to hold third place. St. Louis county will have nearly ten thousand votes this year and will be an easy third, and not many years will pass before she will be advanced to first place.

A St. Louis newspaper reporter tells a story of a man who was trying to learn to play the accordion, who blew this brains out. The story is discredited because a man with brains has never been known to have a desire to play the accordion.

There are in Kentucky six counties which have never had a church within their borders during the sixty or seventy years of their organization as counties. One of them is Knott county. All are Democratic strong holds.

Col. C. H. Graves, the Republican candidate for the legislature, will, if elected be a candidate for speaker. He will make a thorough canvass for the position.

John L. Sullivan is not dead, although he is very sick. He will not fight Kilrain. He has a match with the champion of champions. Death, and he hopes to be able to stay a few more rounds.

SOUTH DULUTH AGAIN.
THE SO CALLED SOUTH DULUTH ADDITION AGAIN COMES TO THE SURFACE.

One real estate firm in Duluth has within the past two weeks received no less than three letters from St. Paul people inquiring the value of lots in South Duluth and asking other information regarding the supposed addition. This bare faced swindle has been punctured so frequently in the columns of all Duluth newspapers that it seems totally unnecessary to again refer to it. But the American public is easily swayed and the purchase of lots in this swampy 20 miles south east of Superior still goes on. It would be a good thing for the Duluth real estate market and for the reputation of dealers here could they so widely publish this swindle as to forever set it at rest. Those who are caught by it, and they are evidently many, do not spread any pleasant report of Duluth as a result and the city suffers in consequence.

EXCURSION TICKETS.
TO WHITE BIRCH AND UPPER LAKE ST. CROIX
During the season the "Northwestern Line"—Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railway—will sell on Saturdays and Sundays good to return on Monday following, excursion tickets from Duluth to Upper Lake St. Croix and return at the low rate of $1.15 for the round trip. Have you ever spent the day at this charming spot? There you have fishing and shooting, beautiful grounds, and everything that would make a picnic enjoyable. Tickets 1 city or depot office.

A Hint to Puffy People.
From their arrival on this planet, to their usually early departure from it, people of weak constitutions and angular physiques pass a sort of half-existence. Like domestic turkeys in their home retreats, afraid of heat, afraid of cold, constantly afraid that the shadow of the dread reaper will materialize and exact the forfeit which he demands from all, sooner or later. No finer medicinal assurance of comparative vigor for the feeble exists than that afforded by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Used with persistence—not with spurts and spasms—this genial and professionally commended tonic will do much toward increasing strength into a puny system, and rounding off scrawny angles in the human figure. Appetite, nerve, tranquility and nightly repose are encouraged by it, and a malarial, rheumatic, bilious tendency overcome. Its restorative digestion and prevents kidney troubles.

Special Notice to the Ladies.
You must not forget that the chance is now open to you to have your measures taken and order anything you want in furs. Our Mr. Horton is now here at "The Big Duluth" with full line of our seal, mink and plush garments. There are none like them. We have supplied most of the fine furs worn in this city, and our goods are too well known to need any praise. You can get a good seal angora for $125.00, Astrakhan garment at $42.00, and the finest plush cloaks made. Don't fail to call and see and talk with Mr. Horton even if you don't want to buy. He will be pleased to show the goods.

Is Not This So?
"I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly" of course you do, and so does every one else affected with poor memory. But here's a "cure" worth much money. Send to Prof. Loietto, the great memory specialist, 237 Fifth avenue, New York, for a copy of his prospectus; take his course on memory training, and, our word for it, in a few weeks' time your difficulty will be how to forget, not how to remember. Thousands of prominent people endorse it.

WEST END BOOM IN BUILDING.

Noticeable among the new buildings at the West End this summer is the new addition to the Clarendon hotel. It speaks well for the hotel that they have found their present house too small for the demands of the traveling public. In conversation with Mr. E. G. Wallinder, foreman for Messrs. Waterworth & Fee, the contractors for the Clarendon, it was learned that they were nearly through with their work there, and would soon go over to Superior to start work on the new hotel there.

Mr. Wallinder is well and favorably known here, having come from Cabelonia, Dakota, over a year ago, and he has been in the employ of Messrs. Waterworth & Fee, contractors and builders, for some time.

While in conversation with Mr. Wallinder, the reporter learned that he had not found life a flowery bed of ease by any means. He said that nearly as long ago as he could remember, his trouble started; first he only noticed a liability to take cold easily, and that kept increasing, until he found he had a cold almost all the time, especially had this been noticeable for the last year. There was a dropping of mucus from the head into the throat, hawking and sitting a great deal, headache, often very severe, at other times a dull heavy feeling through the forehead and over the eyes. When stooping at work, or at other times, there would be a fullness in the head and ringing in the ears. Pain through the chest, felt most on the left side. Appetite was very poor, and had a tired languid feeling most of the time. Sleep not appearing to do him the good it should, also had a very bad cough. He was feeling as above described when he went to see Dr. Cosman, nearly two months ago. He had been reading the daily papers and reading of cases affected similarly to himself, who had been treated with success by Dr. Cosman, so he concluded to go and see the doctor. After careful examination of his case, the doctor told him he was suffering with chronic catarrh and bronchitis, that he could treat him successfully, but that it would take time to effect a cure. So he started treatment at once and with the happiest results, for today, after less than two months' treatment, he feels as well as he ever did and attributes this all to the excellent skill and treatment of Dr. Cosman, and would recommend any suffering as he was to go and see the doctor.

THE BILL O'SALE.

A Love Story About a Flucky Girl, and the way Justice is Meted out in a Mormon Camp.

They were the most contented family in the world. The father was by turns a prospector, a trapper or a rancher, but he never succeeded in making a good living in any way. He was a remarkably handsome mountaineer, tall and strong, and he looked on honest labor as quite beneath him. His word was his bond, he contracted no debts that he could not pay, and he was a fair steer and divided the meat among his neighbors, who sent him vegetables and groceries in return, and never asked where the fat steer had come from. Perhaps they knew. When a herd passed along the dusty high road, the women smiled at each other and said: "I guess we'll have some fresh meat to-morrow."

Sometimes he would drive into town with a team of high stepping, smooth coated horses attached to his rusty old buck board. Then his friends crowded about them, stroking the glossy necks, examining the white teeth, but no one in this little Mormon settlement ever thought of inquiring where he got them.

Dick Johnson was the kindest of men to his friends and family, yet he had his secret. He would be lynchd promptly if he should ever return to Montana; he had shot a bridge keeper who dominated all of him, and, altogether, the sudden deaths of a half-dozen men were caused by the well known fact that "Old Dick was mighty lively with his pistol when he got nutt' whiskey aboard."

His wife did not always have a good print dress to wear to town, the children were seldom provided with shoes, but she always seemed contented and lazily happy, and there was not a murmur set of little ones. The mother was a fair haired, blue eyed woman, and the children all looked like her.

"The children mostly all look like me," she would say, with an amiable smile, "and I'm sure, Caddie, an' I guess she looks more like her pa."

"You kin jest bet I do, and I'm mighty glad I haven't no towhead like these here young 'uns," Caddie would answer. She was a remarkably handsome girl, and people who admired her delicate, dark face were always shocked when her coarse voice and coarser language were heard. Of course, this energetic girl ruled the whole family; the man, who, in spite of his strength and ferocity, was as tender hearted and simple minded as a child, the indolent, amiable woman, and the warm of tow headed children.

There was something of something different from the vagrant life that satisfied the rest of the family. Sometimes she saw herself a busy wife and mother, moving about the two or three rooms of a log farm house, with a few hardy flowers struggling for existence in the small front garden, with current bushes, strawberry vines, and flourishing vegetables surrounding the house, and with waving fields of grain stretching away to the dark mountains that bound these western valleys. She confided these visions to her mother once.

"I tell yer what, maw," she said, "when I git married I hain't a goin' to be no such a ferlon' d'by shanty as this here. I'll hev to be a log house, an' a d'rnal wall plastered, an' white washed inside an' out. An' there'll be the purtiest rag carpet on the front room floor you ever see, an' a good board floor in the kitchen, too. An' I'll hev a likely colt to ride, an' some cows, so's to hev lots of milk an' butter, an' yer lawd, I'll be the boss o' the h'nd golden ranch."

"Yer always had fine ideas in yer head, Caddie," drawled her mother, "an' if yer marries Bishop Burns, kin yer be wants yer lawd, maybe he'll give yer a log house, but yer know well enuf that Dan Williams can't do no such thing fer yer."

"Huh!" observed Caddie; "if that bull headed old Burns ever comes a-alivin' round here, he'll get a crack in his jaw 'n' make him see stars, or else my name hain't Cad Johnson."

"Well, I guess he'd better not risk it then," said the woman, with a feeble laugh; "yer be p'ke a h'finten' up the horses, Caddie, an' I reckon yer'd better pack that there bit o' butter in a box, an' maybe old Burns'll give yer some shoes fer it if yer real nice ter him."

"All right," answered Caddie; "look-ehere, yer Tom, I'll kick yer into the middle of next week if you don't try'n' to lase that there pig. Come along here now, an' git yer face washed. We're goin' to the 'Co-op,' an' maybe you'll git some candy, if you behave yersef."

There was only one seat in the wagon, and on it sat Dick Johnson and his wife, who held the baby in her arms. Caddie sat on the box in the back of the wagon, and the children rolled around her in the hay that was always taken along for the horses to eat while the women were trading in the Co-operative store and the man was drinking at the one saloon.

The road ran along the bank of the river, whose gleaming breasts, seen at intervals through the overhanging willows, together with the long sweep of green, and brown, and gold bunch grass that bowed its tasseled heads as the breeze passed over it, waving like a many colored sea away to the dark mountains with their snowy peaks, formed a picture almost sublime in its perfect loveliness.

"That there grass is e'en a most ready cut," remarked old Dick; "I guess I'll borrow the bishop's hay rake to-morrow, an' go after a load o' hay, an' yer yunguns kin come along an' help stamp it if yer want it."

The children set up a joyful shout, for this was a treat for them, as it would be to any one, to tumble about in the long grass to fish for minnows in the cool, gurgling creek; to wade into it knee deep for water-cress; to pick tart, wild strawberries, and to eat all these delicacies with the sweet homemade bread and country butter. And after this delightful day, how pleasant it was to roll in the sweet smelling hay, with the breezes cooling their sun burned cheeks, during the long ride home.

The wagon drew up at last in front of the village store, and the girl marshaled the children into the "Co-op," with a good deal of forcible persuasion.

"How do do, Sister Johnson," said the storekeeper, who was also the Mormon bishop; "well, Caddie, I see you're as fat and savvy as you ever was."

Caddie stared at him severely, not because she was offended at his free language, but because she was used to that; but this uncouth creature had as much natural coquetry as any other 15-year-old girl.

"How much do you pay'n' fer tip top butter now?" she asked; "I'll let you hev this here, ef you'll give me six bits a roll fer it."

"Oh, come now," he said; "you don't want to do me out o' all my profits like that. Seem's to me, I'll let you hev two bits a pound fer it, an' that's more'n I'd do fer anybody else."

"Well," said the girl, "I guess I'll jest look at some shoes, an' I kin see a pair I like, I'll take 'em fer the butter."

Caddie's mother had gone with her numerous offspring to visit a friend, and Caddie was left alone to do her trading. Her elderly admirer took advantage of this fact to plead his cause with the handsome girl.

"You've got a purty little foot fer a gal o' yer size," he said, as she tried on a pair of calfskin shoes, deciding sharply, "when why don't you give 'em to her? Lord knows she needs 'em bad enuf."

"Now, look a-here, 'em," he said, "het's tomfoolishness, an' you know it; Mirandy don't want fer nothin', and she don't care about flatterin', but most girls does, an' I tell you what, my second'll be the nicest duds o' any woman in town."

"Caddie had put her shoes on again by this time, and she did not propose to listen to him any longer. It would not be wise to quarrel with the bishop, but she did not desire to play second fiddle in no kind of sense," and she told him so.

"How, how, how," he laughed, "I guess not. I kin jest see the way my old man'll hev to stop around when you air Mrs. Burns. See here, Caddie," he added, as she turned to go, "I want to talk to you, an' you might jest as well listen now as any other time. You know your pa went prospectin' last year, an' I furnished the grub for the trip. Well, he found a purty good claim, an' now an eastern company's sent an expert out here to look at it, an' he's as not they'll buy it. Well, one night yer pa got purty full here in town, an' I got him to sign a bill o' sale of the mine. Now he don't know nothin' 'bout the company, an' he don't know that the paper he signed was a bill o' sale. I've got a grumble on the mine, anyway, an' I've got mines o' my own an' money too, an' I wouldn't mind givin' this bill o' sale to you if you'd be so kind as to marry me like your pa wants you to."

"I don't believe you've got no bill o' sale," said the girl, quickly, "show me the paper."

Her face was dark with anger. She looked very pretty, as she sat there in the dingy little store, on a long packing box, her glorious brown hair had been blown loose by the wind, her ragged sun longest hung by its strings about her neck, her blue eyes were bright with excitement, and her brown cheeks glowed. The bishop looked at her admiringly as he returned with the paper. She rose to her feet, and her slight, round figure showed, even through the clumsy pink calico, its graceful curves. She moved round between him and the open door of the store, in which a good fire burned, for the evenings are cold in these mountain villages, and then, as he read aloud, she suddenly snatched the paper and threw it into the stove. He sprang forward with an oath, but it was too late, and when he turned to look for the girl, she was gone.

The next day Dick Johnson rode up to the saloon, and gravely announced to the loungers there that he meant to shoot old Burns on sight, and that the said Burns had better have his gun handy. Then the injured man began to fortify himself with whiskey for the approaching duel.

"What's the matter with Burns?" asked one of the crowd; "if allus thought that you was on the best kind o' terms with the bishop."

"Oh, he's lived long enough, that's all," answered Dick; "an' my arms air a gittin' rusty fer want o' use."

His enemy had been warned, Dick was drunk enough to be dangerous, and so he thought there was no reason for waiting any longer, and, rising, he slipped quietly out of the saloon, and walked over to the "Co-op." Arriving there, he stood near the door, watching the proprietor, until the latter turned, when the hands of both men flew to their revolvers, and the shots rang out. The bishop fell, and Dick, who was a dead shot, stood calmly looking at his victim. The murdered man's wife ran in from her rooms behind the store, and flung herself down beside the body with a heart rending shriek. Then the men from the saloon rushed in, and stood around, looking silently at the bleeding corpse and at the poor wife, who mourned the dead man as sincerely as though he had been the kindest of husbands to her.

Her pitiful sobbing aroused the sympathies of the rough crowd, and they began to look angrily at the victor. One man pointed significantly to a coil of rope lying on the counter, but the real looked at the revolver still grasped in the fallen man's hand, and they shook their heads.

Dick Johnson saw and understood, and he quietly backed up against the wall, drew another six shooter, and proceeded to make his defense. He told the story of the bill of sale. "You see, boys, he swindled me. Now you know, a man ain't a goin' to be cheated like that, an' not try to git revenge fer it. I give him fair warnin', he had his chance at me; I done it all up reglar, an' there hain't no call fer hand feelin's agin' me. I'm sorry fer him, but you know it, ain't any fault but cause her man was a scamp, an' needed his peace. These men were not cowards, but they knew they could not take him alive armed in that way, and, besides, they thought his conduct quite proper, so he was promptly acquitted by this informal jury, and he went quietly home.

This was truly justice done. Thus, too, was it that Caddie did not marry a bishop, but because Dan Williams' bride—L. C. Whittier in the Argonaut.

The Age of Aluminum.

Experiments have been under way at Cleveland for some months which promise to provide a process that will produce aluminum at a cost that will finally bring that wonderful metal into all the arts. When this is done the century will be as emphatically the age of aluminum as this is the age of steel. Ships, locomotives, railroads, great guns, flying machines, houses, churches, stables, knives, forks, razors, sewing machines, type, printing presses, and every other sort of structure or tool in which iron or steel is now used will be made of aluminum as soon as that substance is produced cheaply and plentifully.

It is only a question of time now when that result will be reached. It is the most plentiful metal in the world, as it occurs in common clay, and the trouble lies, not, as is, to isolate it cheaply. It is light, tough and strong, easily worked, and better adapted to the needs of civilization than any other similar material. When it can be made for the same price as iron you will see all the iron foundries close up, or go to work, and within a decade that result will be reached. You may be certain that the skeleton of coming civilization will be made of aluminum.—Chicago News.

A Hint to Puffy People.

From their arrival on this planet to their usually early departure from it, people of weak constitutions and angular physiques pass a sort of half-existence. Like dormice they burrow in their home retreats, afraid of heat, afraid of cold, constantly afraid that the shadow of the dread reaper will materialize and exact the forfeit which he demands from all, sooner or later. No finer medicinal assurance of comparative vigor for the feeble exists than that afforded by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Used with persistence—not with apert and spasms—this genial and professionally commended tonic will do much toward insuring strength into a puny system, and rounding off sawny angles in the human figure. Appetite, nerve, tranquillity and nightly repose are encouraged by it, and a malarial, rheumatic, bilious tendency overcome. It reestablishes digestion and prevents kidney troubles.

THE SUPERIOR SEX.

An Interesting Report From a Recognized Authority—Why Women are Longer Lived than Men.

Professor Stanford E. Chaille, M. D., dean of the medical faculty of Tulane university, a recognized authority in matters of sanitary philosophy and hygiene, has recently published an interesting report on the life and death rates of New Orleans as compared with those of other cities. Attention here is directed to some deductions which the professor derives from his statistics, and if we may trust in this case to the somewhat questionable statement that "figures never lie," we are brought face to face with some remarkable and strikingly suggestive facts.

Our professor's statistics, which are, of course, perfectly accurate and honorable as far as he is concerned, are derived partly from the records of the Louisiana board of health, which is charged with the duty of recording all births and deaths in this city, and partly from the mortality tables of the tenth United States census, and they are doubtless as reliable as such collated figures usually are. From them it is discovered that in most parts of the United States women have a better expectation of life than men; they live longer and survive with more tenacity and success the vicissitudes that tend to shorten existence. But it is in New Orleans where these advantages are enjoyed to the highest degree over any other place.

THE SUPERIOR SEX.

Here a learned physiologist presents a formidable array of figures to show that in the struggle for life the softer sex starts out with decided advantages of immunity from the results of death as compared with the males; that the women have better chances for development in all that makes up sane, sound and vigorous life. In a word, the men are on the down grade of health and morals, while the women possess all that conduce to their physical and moral superiority. Let us quote the words of our scientist:

"The expectation of life for females is, in every locality, better than that of males, but the difference in favor of females varies greatly, and to an extent imperceptible by me. The superiority of white females over males is greatest, and very great, in New Orleans and Charleston; it is a little in Boston, Brooklyn and New York, and it is very slight and least in New Jersey and Massachusetts. The fourteenth localities take, in reference to this superiority of females over males, the following order: New Orleans, Charleston, Cincinnati, San Francisco, St. Louis, Chicago, Philadelphia, District of Columbia, Baltimore, New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Massachusetts, New Jersey.

"The like superiority and difference exists in reference to colored females and males. The localities reported, only four, take the following order: New Orleans, again first, and the difference is very great, though not as great as between white females and males; next Baltimore, then the District of Columbia, and last Charleston. And it is very singular that in Charleston, where the superiority of the white female is very great, the superiority of the colored female over the colored male is very little.

"Another singular fact is that, while there is a slight superiority in Massachusetts of the females over the males, yet the males have the superiority from two to ten years of age, and that this male superiority is found in all other localities. A third singular fact, and one encouraging specially to New Orleans, is that the expectation of life of its white females is superior to that of the white females of Charleston, Brooklyn, New York and Boston; but the expectation of life of the white males of New Orleans is less than in said places."

THE SEVERAL REASONS WHY.

Why is all this possible? Our author replies: "Females are, in less number, guilty of vicious and brutal excesses; they are more confined in the house and engaged in less hazardous occupations, and thereby they are less exposed to communicable diseases, to inclemencies of weather and to dangerous accidents. But these obvious causes, while explaining in part, fail to do so in whole. For at no time is the superiority of females as great as under 5 years of age, and such superior advantage is more exposed to the above causes. For such reasons vital statisticians have claimed that nature endows the female with a stronger vitality with greater vital endurance, and if there be better explanation I do not know it."

We are to believe, then, that while women are, in obedience to subtle forces of evolution, growing physically more perfect, and this would seem also to include advancement toward moral perfection, the men are declining in all vital characteristics. The women are growing constantly more beautiful and more numerous, while the men are in a corresponding ratio to retire from the world they have for so many ages dominated and controlled. By these mysterious and potential agencies the men are dying, fading out of existence, and their last despairing gaze is to be fixed on a race of goddesses, "divinely tall and most divinely fair," crowding upon the stage where the tremendous tragedy of "Man and Woman" has been so long enacted, but now to be superseded by the inexpressible peculiar and unknowable drama, "Woman."

It is to this ending that all the musty figures and dry bones of science presented above inevitably tend. It is the consummation of an implacable law which is destiny, declaring the survival of the fittest. It portends a grand future for women, but it is much to be doubted if Eve can be happy in paradise without Adam.—New Orleans Picayune.

He Won a Victory.

Two colored men were wrangling and lawing at the corner of Chene street and Gratiot avenue the other day, and a patrolman who passed along felt it his duty to keep an eye on them. He paced up and down for half an hour, but no blows were struck, and he finally called one of the men over to him and asked:

"What's the trouble between you two?"

"He said I was no gunlaw, sah."

"And you have been trying to convince him that you were?"

"Yes, sah."

"No, sah—no, sah—not at this stage of the game. He's bin yellin' an' shoutin' an' argy-bargy 'till he can hardly speak above a whisper, an' in five minutes he'll be here to yield de pint."

He was a true prophet. He went back, raised a new question, and the man who had said he was no gentleman extended his hand and humbly whispered that he took it all back.—Detroit Free Press.

WEST SUPERIOR.

House company No. 1 held its regular meeting last night.
Mr. McGlen and family are visiting at Judge S. H. Clough's.
T. W. Barham is again able to be around after a week of sickness.
Miss Bertha Clough, who has been seriously ill for some time, is now suffering from a relapse.
The Smiths and wife are spending a few weeks in the coast, visiting some of the principal cities.
A Newton Brown, the genial and obliging teller of the West Superior bank, is taking a few days well earned holiday at E. R. Parks' home.

More new buildings to be built in Central Park this fall, materials for which have been placed upon the ground this week. Among those who are building, is Peter Hansson, the popular Tower avenue clothier.
The Scandinavian Reformation Club met last night at the Opera Hall for the purpose of perfecting the organization. George Anderson called the meeting to order and the committee appointed to draft the constitution and by-laws made their report, which upon motion was adopted. The election of officers by ballot then followed. Lars Lenroth was elected President; Geo. Anderson and Chas. Lagro, vice-presidents; H. O. Walski, secretary; Ole Hand, treasurer. The creation of a committee consisting of the following gentlemen: Chas. Johnson, Chas. Anderson, Ole Roung, O. J. Collins, J. A. Brandt. The club is now fully organized with a membership of 550. The regular meetings will be held the first Thursday in each month.

Swallowing a Thermometer.
Dr. M. Singer, of Galveston, Tex., writes: The patient, a German, who understood but little English, was admitted to the hospital for a fever not yet diagnosed. As soon as he was seated by his bedside I introduced the thermometer into his mouth, enjoining him at the same time not to bite or swallow it. Standing in front of my patient, I saw the thermometer disappear in his mouth, while at the same time a motion, as of deglutition, was performed by the man. When I recovered from the shock caused by the sight, I asked him what he had done with the thermometer. He answered that he had understood me to say that he should swallow it, and, of course, he had obeyed orders.
I snatched a blanket from the bed and spread it on the floor, then making the man lie flat on his stomach on the blanket, I told him to hang down over the edge of it. I told him that unless he wished to die he should introduce his fingers as far down the throat as possible and make one supreme effort to vomit. This was quickly and efficiently done, for in less time than it takes me to relate it, the thermometer was regurgitated, and fell safe and sound on the blanket. I took the precaution of tying a thread to my instrument whenever afterward it became necessary to take the temperature of this or any other such bright minded patient. Medical Record.

ON CHANGE.

A DULL MARKET, WITH LITTLE TRADING BUT ON A HIGHER RANGE.
Today's market for wheat has been dull but firm and higher. The extreme dullness of the week results from several causes, among which are the agitation over the Minnesota grain made by the committee and the frost scare, as well as the small quantity in store and the small receipts. Trading was all in small lots for the day. The close was strong at the outside prices of the day, and 1 to 1 1/4 above the opening.
Cash 1 hard sold at 102 1/2, 1 northern at 104, No. 2 at 104 and rejected at 79. September opened at 102 1/2, closed at 103 and 103 1/2. October opened at 102 1/2, closed at 103 1/2. December opened at 103 1/2, closed at 104 1/2. May opened at 104 1/2, advanced and closed at 105 1/2.

CORN NOTES.

Barnd cables this morning reported wheat at opening firm in London with corn quiet.
Shipments of corn since last night have been four cargoes 108,468 bushels, nearly reaching our elevators out of that grain.
Receipts posted today were 38,335 bushels, shipments 40,000 bushels wheat and 14,000 bushels corn on truck were 65.
Stocks of wheat in store here are about 438,100 bushels, of which 425,000 are contract grade. This is a decrease of 180,000 for the week.

It is reported on good authority that Carroll & Co., one of the largest elevator companies of the Northwest, are going to close twenty-five of their elevators.
Mr. Harrison of the Bellows Works, Milwaukee, is in Duluth on business connected with the new Imperial mill. His firm is looking for the machinery contract of the mill.
A well known New York commission man, telegraphed yesterday about Buffalo wheat in New York at 12 cents over December, to be shipped back to Buffalo.

Today's close as compared with a week ago is better by 3c on cash and September, 1c on October, 4c on December and 1 1/2c on May. As compared with a year ago the present prices are 28 cents better.
Cash Gifford, considered by many to be the best authority on the board, as follows: "There is not 3,000,000 bushels of contract wheat in the present visible supply that is available to be shipped to Chicago. To do this we must take all the contract wheat in other markets, and leave them without any for their own shorts. Millers in the Northwest are paying Chicago prices. This will cut off Chicago's receipts until a change in the contract wheat in December and May in Duluth show that they have either raised or lowered the price in the Northwest or think so. A Minneapolis correspondent of a commission firm telegraphed that he had taken with all the elevator men of that city, and they all said that receipts would not increase, but believed they would fall off, as farmers were very generally storing their wheat, and will hold it for higher prices. Another correspondent quotes Del Rio, the Dakota wheat monarch, as follows: "Threshers more disappointed as to quality and quantity. Eighty bushels to the acre of No. 3 best grade average attainable for Minnesota and Dakota. Farmers marketing slowly. Duluth and Minneapolis receipts will run light."

MEXICAN BULL FIGHT.

A Description from the Pen of Gen. Logan's Daughter.
On Sunday we witnessed a thoroughly Spanish amusement, a bull fight, which was long ride in the horse cars, which went at a galloping pace, an improvement on our last coachman, we reached the grounds, where from the outside, greatly resembled an American circus. The usual number of small boys, however, being absent, raising the dust, vendors of dirty cakes and candies, "tamables" (or corn cakes), spears with ornaments of paper on them, which were afterward learned were to stick into the poor beasts, all tended to bewilder you, but after some discussion and much gesticulation, we purchased our tickets and were shown what they called a private box, but to seem more like a stall in a barn. The entire circle of seats was packed with people, many women among the throng. The seats in the shade are higher priced than those in the sun, and we were glad to find ours were out of its boiling rays. The band played "Olivette," the people cheered and hurried on the event of the afternoon.
Soon the gates to the right of the arena were thrown open and about twelve men dressed in gorgeously embroidered suits, two as clowns, four men on horses, which were covered with a leathern armor, and four large men on foot, with ribbons of various colors entered. The latter were harnessed to an arrangement of straps and hooks which we found later were to draw the animal slain. After marching around amid the wild cheers and waving of the sombreros of the people, they took their places about the ring, the music withdrawing until required. In a moment the gates of the left were thrown open, as they consider it, consists in waving bright colored (nearly all are scarlet) cloths or large pieces of cloth at the poor beast, who rushes about from one to the other, each in turn more infuriated, but the first animal brought in on this day was too docile, and did not prove sufficiently entertaining, as the judge gave the signal (the trumpet sound) the matadors, or master of ceremonies in the arena, took the sword and a scarlet cloth and rushed to the center of the arena, at the same time a motion, as of deglutition, was performed by the man. When I recovered from the shock caused by the sight, I asked him what he had done with the thermometer. He answered that he had understood me to say that he should swallow it, and, of course, he had obeyed orders.
I snatched a blanket from the bed and spread it on the floor, then making the man lie flat on his stomach on the blanket, I told him to hang down over the edge of it. President's Proclamation.

SPECIAL.

Whereas, From day to day vast numbers are being stricken down with the fell disease Rheumatism, which seems to be greatly on the increase.

And whereas, The nation has within a short time been called upon to mourn the sudden loss of many of our public men, such as Vice-President Hendricks, Gen. John A. Logan, Secy Daniel P.

Manning, Gen. McClellan, and many others.

Now therefore, I do by virtue of the knowledge possessed by me, proclaim and recommend Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup to be a remedy of great merit, both for Rheumatism and all Blood Diseases.

And further, That this medicine be adopted as a national remedy by all.

Signed by the President.

My daughter Maud had inflammatory rheumatism. Her limbs were badly swollen. She was in terrible agony. She had been taking Rheumatic Syrup and using your Plasters, which has broken it up. The Syrup corrected her indigestion, cleared the rheumatic poison from her blood, and she is now able to be around the house. I consider Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters remedies of great merit.

Pastor First M. E. Church, Fremont, Mich.

Last winter and spring I was a terrible sufferer from rheumatism in my left shoulder and arm, suffering the most excruciating pain. Two bottles of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Plasters cured me. I can now do my work. I can now do my work. I can now do my work.
